LD - Leadership

Chapter Description:

For any ambulatory care center, quality and patient safety depend on effective leadership. It is important for all ambulatory care centers to have a clearly stated mission. It is the responsibility of the leadership of the center to develop the mission and provide adequate resources to fulfill this mission. The Center's director is selected by the governing body has ultimate responsibility for quality and patient safety. To ensure quality and safety of healthcare services, the members of the leadership group must work collaboratively, communicate effectively through clear lines of authority, and coordinate and integrate services provided.

Ambulatory care centers may vary in size, type of ownership, and complexity of service. Each center regardless of its complexity has a governing body, e.g., ministry of health or an owner(s). This chapter addresses the roles and responsibilities of the leadership group for the following processes:
